Parson Brownlow on the Poor East Tennesseeans.

A REPLY ADVISED.

Parson Brownlow, who seems to have played out at the North in his original role of exile and patriot, but is still determined to keep himself in the public mind, gets off the following in a letter to the Cincinnati Gazette:

"But the poor East Tennesseeans have no friends who can be heard or respected in their behalf. They are now ordered into those ice-bound mountains of Virginia, to be starved, frozen to death, and butchered by superior forces without money, clothes, or tents. I predict a general rebellion and revolt, and hope it may come, if they are forced into Virginia. If they have the pluck I think they have, they will snuff themselves to be shot before they will obey the order. They want to fight their way into Tennessee, where their families are starving, plundered and oppressed, because the heads of their families are in the United States service. Let it be remembered that while our Generals find it impracticable to cross into East Tennessee with an army and its necessary transportation, Bragg and Kirby Smith can cross the same mountains into Kentucky and invade that State. Let our Government, then, turn over to Brigadier General Carter or Spears this Cumberland Gap army and its accompaniments, and I will underwrite that they will go into East Tennessee, take the country and hold it."

I now propose to the Government, in good faith, to give me the command of 15,000 men, including those East Tennesseeans and all the outfit necessary, and I promise to take East Tennessee before Christmas, and to hold it and its railroads. I am in earnest in making this request. I am sick and tired of this criminal and uncalled-for delay in seizing upon the strong point of the rebellion. Besides, I am able to go into active service, and if I can't get into the army, I must at once start a paper at the North, for the benefit of Northern sympathizers with this rebellion, and Secession Generals, and Secession Staff Officers who are in the United States army.

W. G. BROWNLOW.

THE GUERRILLA ATTACKS ON STEAMERS—A NEW YORK COTTON BUYER KILLED.—The Federal steamer Gladiator, plying between Memphis and Helena, Ark., was boarded by guerrillas on the 19th October, and Wm. R. Babcock, a Cotton buyer, of the firm of Babcock Bros. & Co., killed. Several others were wounded. The boat was then set on fire and set adrift. The Memphis correspondent of the New York Herald, writing on the 20th ult., says:

The attempt of the guerrillas to cut off our communication, and to starve us out, has induced Gen. Sherman to issue orders for carrying into operation Special Order No. 254. Accordingly the names of forty-two families having husbands in the rebel army have been put in a lottery, and twenty drawn out, ten for each boat fired into.

They will have three days' notification to leave Memphis, and reside twenty-five miles from our lines. I learn from Col. J. H. Anthony, our popular and efficient Provost Marshal, that the notification will positively be served on every one of the twenty-to-morrow morning.

A later letter gives a list of twenty-seven ladies and seven men, all ordered out of Memphis for the above affair.

VIEW OF THE SITUATION FROM RUSSIA.

The St. Petersburg (Russia) correspondent of the New York Herald, writing on the 20th ultimo, says:

There is apparently some foundation for the report that the British Cabinet, whose policy, as Sir Henry Bulwer so expresses it, is to subordinate the welfare of the Christian races to the Ottoman empire, has induced Napoleon III, to abstain from any further interference in Eastern affairs by promising to meet his wishes in reference to America. The French Emperor is to do what he likes with Mexico—keep it for himself, give it to his cousin, annex the whole or part of it to the new Southern Republic. Lord Palmerston will not object to anything, if he only leaves the rest of Europe in possession of that horde of Mahomedan conquerors whose safety is watched over with such anxious solicitude by Christian England.

ANOTHER DIFFICULTY IN LOUISVILLE.

Lieut. Gay, who returned from Louisville to-day reports difficulty at the Gall House, on Sunday evening, between Governor Morton and General Boyle. The latter, while in conversation, made some wholesale reflections upon the courage of Indiana soldiers. Governor Morton promptly took it up, and, after some words had passed between them, the offensive insult having been repeated, he deliberately slapped his face. Gen. McCook at once stepped forward and assumed the insult so far as Governor Morton was concerned, gave Gen. Boyle to understand that he was responsible for it. This is the story as Mr. Gay heard it on the street. We give it for what it is worth.—Leave our Course.

THE ROLL OF HONOR.—By joint resolution of the Legislature of Alabama, the Governor is authorized to prepare a book in which shall be placed the name, regiment and residence of every soldier from that State who has died in the service of his country during the present war.

LETTER FROM A FAITHFUL SERVANT.

As showing the feeling which actuates the more intelligent class of servants, and we believe the majority of our slave population, we give the following extract from the letter of a faithful nurse, now in the country, with her master's family, but bearing a soldier in the service. We present the letter verbatim, only supplying the points and capital letters.

It is to rob such as her of their kind masters and friends, and to destroy the happy relationship which her simple letter describes, that the Abolition vandals are deluging the land with blood. Surely the curse of Heaven will rest upon such enemies of the human race.—Southern News.

Oct. 26, 1862.

My dear Master and Friends.

I have been promising to write to you, and now I have taken my pen in hand to fulfill my promise. It seems like such a long time since we have seen you. I began this letter on the 26th, but after I began I found Gassy writing, so I put my own aside. It is now the 29th. Oh how all long to see Savannah again. Do if you come in contact with any of those heartless Yankees, give them a few hot shots of a bombshell and clear them from our coasts. They never gave as our home and they have no right to it. Our soldiers may have a long fight, but I hope they will fight, and watch, and pray, and never give up the field, for the Lord has said in his written word that the race is not for the swift nor the battle with the strong.

The children are all well. I wish you could see dear little Sallie. She has improved wonderful and she is so sweet.

She is one of the dearest little loves you ever saw. She takes up the newspaper and reads it in her own language, and she sings so sweetly.

All the children join me in love to you.

Your affectionate nurse,

N.

THE SOUTH "A NATION."—The following extract from the late speech of Mr. Gladstone, the English Chancellor of the Exchequer, we find in the Baltimore Advertiser of the 28th ult., over which it appears in a dreadful tremor, styling it an insidious attempt at commissariation. We quote:

"It may be that a time might arrive when it would be the duty of Europe to offer a word of expostion, or of friendly aid towards composing the quarrel. If it be even possible that such a time as that may arrive, how important it is that when that word comes, it should address itself to minds which are not embittered by the recollection that unkind things have been said and done towards them in Europe, and above all in England, the country which, however they may find fault with it from time to time, we know holds the highest place in their admiration and respect."

SUPPLIES FOR OUR SOLDIERS.—We have been permitted to see a private letter from a volunteer in Virginia, to a relative in this city, of the date of October 23d, from Baker's Hill, Va. The writer says:

"I have a good basket and oil cloth which I got from the Yankees. There are thousands of our men without either. Our Generals appear to be endeavoring to supply our wants. A large quantity of clothing, shoes, &c., has been received since our arrival here, but it appeared small in comparison with the wants of the army.

"I hope that the different States will look out and see that their troops are supplied the winter is fully on us, or there will be much suffering."

Beware of a woman who worships dress. In nine cases out of ten such a woman is without one redeeming qualification.—Dressy people are those who lack brains and education, and cheat themselves into the belief that the world is admiring their gewgaws, forgets that their hearts are untempered by a single womanly emotion.—A man who is attracted by mere dress, is undeserving of the name, and is a dear barge in even to the fool who entraps him.

Substitute for date.

A writer in the Columbia Guardian proposes a substitute for salt for preserving meat. It is, he says, Pyrogallic Acid, which is made from any kind of hard wood, and the quantity of acid obtained is nearly one-half the weight of wood used. The writer remarks:

This acid has been manufactured in the neighborhood of the writer on a small scale, and a few families have used it during the summer and fall for curing meat, and it is a perfect success. It does not answer the purpose of seasoning, but a small quantity of salt does for that purpose. The only objection to it, if it may be called one, is that it imparts a smoky flavor to the meat. It should be condemned in a copper tub or pipe, as iron turns it black. I desire to do no more than call attention to the subject, hoping that we may soon see several distilleries in operation, turning out at least fifteen hundred gallons per day. Twelve or fifteen gallons will cure one thousand pounds of meat.

A brisk Skirmish—the Abolitionist Hosted.

Another letter, dated Centreville, Va., Oct. 25th, gives the particulars of the recent skirmish near that place. The writer admires route, but sticks to the usual Yankee falsehood about "a vastly superior force of the rebels!"

Yesterday noon a brisk skirmish took place between a small force of our cavalry and a vastly superior force of the Rebels. The scene of the action was between Bristow and Castle's Station.

On Thursday some thirty of the Maryland Cavalry went out in that direction to patrol. A force of the First Vermont, of about the same number, were stationed not far off. Both of these were attacked by a force of rebels whose strength was at least four times as great as theirs. After contesting for a short time, our men were forced to retreat.

In a little while, however, Captain Conner, of the third Virginia, came to their relief. The fight was renewed with great energy, and as the Captain was charging through a dense woods he suffered severely. A great many of his men were either killed or taken prisoners. The Captain and his brother, the first Lieutenant, are either captives or have been killed.

Two prisoners were taken by us.

Some of the men who were in the engagement returned last night, but from the confusion that prevailed they were unable to give much definite information.

The minutia of the affair has not been received, nor have any official details been forwarded as yet to the General's headquarters. Consequently, when the men all get together and the officers make their report, the more interesting portions of the narrative can be made public. At present it is difficult to give a correct statement.

By some it is thought that from thirty to fifty of our men were captured.

Last evening about dusk, Col. Wyndham was despatched with one hundred of the 6th Ohio cavalry to proceed to Thorough Gap to bring in the patrols. Our force stationed there was successfully brought away by him. The expedition was fired upon by bushwhackers, and two of the men mortally wounded. An ambulance was sent after them. Towards morning the Colonel returned to this place with his men.

The Dead at Corinth.

A friend at Holly Springs encloses the Mobile Advertiser the following copy of an autograph letter from Gen. Beauregard to Major General Van Dorn, commanding officer of the Confederate forces, who sends his flag of truce, and states that the ample provisions have been made for the burial of the dead, and a soldier's tribute will be paid them, especially those who fell bravely, as many of Major's division did.

John Morgan's Recent Exploits.

The Louisville Journal, of October 22d, devotes a good deal of space to the late exploits of Col. John Morgan. We submit a portion:

Lieut. Harry Choate, of Company E, Sixth Ohio Infantry, and Lieut. Richard Neff, of the Fourth Ohio Cavalry, who left this city on Sunday to join their commands, were captured by Morgan, and were among the paroled prisoners who arrived last evening. When within three miles of Bardstown they rode into the ranks of John Morgan's Cavalry, and were captured. The Rebels carried them over a circuit of twelve miles, and when they arrived at a point four miles south of Bardstown, threw out pickets and sent Company E, of Brady's Kentucky Scouts, to Cox's Creek, where they captured the wagons, one hundred and fifty, a number of which they burned the greater number. Five hundred mules were turned loose, but the Rebels kept the horses. On Monday morning Messrs. Choate and Neff were carried seventeen miles towards Elizabethtown, as they had refused to be paroled. They were paroled on the road between Boston and Elizabethtown, however, and were allowed to return.

The Rebels afterwards entered Elizabethtown, without resistance, where they broke into the post office and took possession of the contents. Two Federal regiments arrived there shortly afterwards, and drove them out, killing four and capturing one lieutenant, who was wounded. The Rebels kept the horses. On Monday morning Messrs. Choate and Neff were carried seventeen miles towards Elizabethtown, as they had refused to be paroled. They were paroled on the road between Boston and Elizabethtown, however, and were allowed to return.

The Rebels afterwards entered Elizabethtown, without resistance, where they broke into the post office and took possession of the contents. Two Federal regiments arrived there shortly afterwards, and drove them out, killing four and capturing one lieutenant, who was wounded.

Either Lieut. Choate or Lieut. Neff had in his possession the commission of Col. Dick Anderson, of the Sixth Ohio Infantry, which Morgan examined, writing upon the face of it "Approved, J. H. Morgan," and returning it to the captives. Lieut. Neff says that Morgan's men are the most gentle lot of thieves he ever saw. When one of them sees a house that he admires, he will say, "That's a good horse." I'd like to trade—dismount, and the exchange is accomplished. They obtain other property, he says, in a similar manner.

Gen. Dumont, who passed through this city last evening on his way to Indiana, says that Col. Komett is in Morgan's train with a strong cavalry force, and that his (Dumont's) cavalry are in his rear, and that there is a strong probability that Morgan's forces will be captured. We do not see it in that way, and have no doubt that the robber rebel has made good his escape.

The Duty and Destiny of the City. The Mobile Register utters a stirring appeal to the citizens in contemplation of an attack. We may present the closing remarks, begging all readers to consider them applicable to Charleston as well as Mobile:

"As for the people of Mobile, their duty is plain. From the grey-haired man to the boy with the bow just shading his lip, all should be in arms. Go home and arm your women what you should do. You will come forth clad in armor to join the throng of your fellow citizens, and to become soldiers until the invader is driven from your doors. By this means, the army of Mobile can be increased by several thousand good firelocks and strong arms.

Think how sweet will be your reward should you thus contribute to save your beloved city from the hand of the tyrant invader. Think how the iron of humiliation will be driven into your souls if, for the lack of your heroic aid, Mobile and the two States which she guards should pass under the yoke of Benjamin F. Butler! By your honor, by your liberty, by the value you set upon your property, and by the love you bear your country, "to arms!" Lay aside your business, give over money making, cease speculating in the commodities of life, forego the hope of selling your tobacco for hostile gold, and give all your thoughts, your energies, and your strength to the defense of your country.

"Do your duty, and Mobile is impregnable. It will be a New Orleans or a Vicksburg, just as you will have it."

WHAT A DESERTER SAID.—The following is an extract from a private letter, dated Warrenton, Fla., October 24th:

A soldier was captured a few days ago by our scouts on the Escambia river, who represents himself as a deserter from Butler's command. He belongs to a Massachusetts regiment; he represents the disaffection so great among his fellow soldiers concerning Lincoln's emancipation proclamation. They did not come South to fight for negroes, but for the Constitution and the whole Union, and are loud in their denunciation of the abolition fanatics. He states that there are many who would desert if a favorable opportunity were offered.

He also confirms the opinion that Butler has moved a large portion of his force elsewhere, but does not know to what particular point.

The Rebels afterwards entered Elizabethtown, without resistance, where they broke into the post office and took possession of the contents. Two Federal regiments arrived there shortly afterwards, and drove them out, killing four and capturing one lieutenant, who was wounded.

Either Lieut. Choate or Lieut. Neff had in his possession the commission of Col. Dick Anderson, of the Sixth Ohio Infantry, which Morgan examined, writing upon the face of it "Approved, J. H. Morgan," and returning it to the captives. Lieut. Neff says that Morgan's men are the most gentle lot of thieves he ever saw. When one of them sees a house that he admires, he will say, "That's a good horse." I'd like to trade—dismount, and the exchange is accomplished. They obtain other property, he says, in a similar manner.

Gen. Dumont, who passed through this city last evening on his way to Indiana, says that Col. Komett is in Morgan's train with a strong cavalry force, and that his (Dumont's) cavalry are in his rear, and that there is a strong probability that Morgan's forces will be captured. We do not see it in that way, and have no doubt that the robber rebel has made good his escape.
